

Elman, Novaes, Zimbalist and Schumann-Heink

By Sylvester Rawling.

VIOLINISTS furnished a large share of the music of the week-end. Mischa Elman played at the Symphony Orchestra's concert in Aeolian Hall yesterday afternoon. He was soloist in Beethoven's concerto in D. Something of the inner spirit of the great work he missed. His own cadenza, although brilliant, illustrates this. Yet he gave freely of his best and won the plaudits of a crowded house. Besides this, Mr. Damrosch's programme held Goldmark's "A Rustic Wedding" symphony, and Liszt's "Mephisto" waltz, both well played.

Efrem Zimbalist, meanwhile, at Carnegie Hall, was giving his only New York violin recital of the season. The large audience was slow in getting seated, the collection of the war tax causing no little confusion. Mr. Zimbalist began with Cesar Franck's sonata, Samuel Chotzinoff playing the piano part. This he followed with Bach's chaconne, unaccompanied. In both he showed the soundness of his musicianship and of his understanding. Lalo's "Symphony Espagnole" and shorter compositions, captivantly played, completed the programme.

Mery Zentay, a young woman violinist, gave a recital at the Cort Theatre last evening. She, too, played the Bach chaconne, and, with Erno Raabe at the piano, D'Ambrosio's concerto, opus 29. The audience was more friendly than discriminating.

Gulomar Novaes, the young woman pianist from Brazil, after six months' absence, gave a recital in Aeolian Hall on Saturday afternoon. Her place with the great players she confirmed. She has gained in power and lost nothing of tonal beauty, or of charm. The two Bach-Busoni chorale preludes with which she began were played masterfully. She gave to the Chopin fantasy, opus 49, something of an original interpretation. To the Beethoven-Rubinstein "Turkish March" she imparted a bounding rhythm and extraordinary gradation. On her programme also were compositions by Gluck, Debussy and Liszt.

Another pianist, Hans Barth, an American, made his New York debut at the Princess Theatre yesterday afternoon. His programme held the Schumann fantasy, opus 17, a Chopin group, compositions by Reger, Reger and MacDowell, and his own pleasant trifle, "Music Box." He has personality, shows deftness, and is not afraid to be dynamic. The audience had reason for finding pleasure in his entertainment.

Mme. Schumann-Heink at Carnegie Hall on Saturday afternoon, gave her only recital in New York this season. That the popular contralto holds her following was shown by the overflow of the audience upon the stage. Several sailor boys, one of her sons included, were there. Not for her own pocket, but for the benefit of such as these, she said, she gave the entertainment. She sang Italian, German and English songs, the latter including Oley Speaks' "When the Boys Come Home" and "America." She had the assistance of Vladimir Dubinsky, Russian violinist, and Edith Evans, accompanist, at the piano. She also introduced Florence French, soprano.

Another singer to give a recital was Leon Rothier, French bass of the Metropolitan Opera Company, heard at Aeolian Hall on Saturday evening. Mr. Rothier's voice is big and his style is distinguished. If something of monotony tinged his programme, his songs were mostly French, but there were some in English. "The Marseillaise" came at the end. Giuseppe Ramboschek of the Metropolitan Opera Company was his accompanist at the piano.

Caruso arrived from South America yesterday, and Mr. Gatti-Casazza announced yesterday the following programme for the opening week, "Aida," with Caruso, a week from to-night already had been announced. The feature is a revival of "Faust," thoroughly overhauled and with new settings for the Saturday matinee. "Boris Godunov" on Wednesday, "L'Elisir d'Amore" on Thursday, "La Boheme" on Friday, with John McCormack, and "La Traviata" on Saturday evening, at popular prices, complete the list.

METROPOLITAN SEASON TO OPEN WITH "AIDA" NOV. 12.

General Manager Gatti-Casazza announced yesterday the following programme for the opening week of the Metropolitan opera season: "Aida," Monday evening, Nov. 12, with Mmes. Muzio, Matzenauer and Sundellus, and Messrs. Caruso, Amato, Mardones as Ramfis (his first appearance at the Metropolitan), Ruydard and Adolfo in the cast. Rose Gail will lead the Corps de Ballet and Roberto Moranzoni will conduct for the first time with the company.

"Boris Godunov" on Wednesday evening, with Mmes. Matzenauer, Braslau, Spar, Howard and Matfield, and Messrs. Caruso, Amato, Ruydard, De Segura, Rossi and Bloch. Mr. Papi will conduct.

"L'Elisir d'Amore" on Thursday evening, with Mmes. Hempel and Sparks, and Messrs. Caruso, Scotti and Didur, Papi conducting.

"La Boheme" on Friday evening, with Mmes. Aida and Ruth Miller (her first appearance at the Metropolitan), and Messrs. John McCormack, De Segura, Chalmers at the piano. Rose Gail will lead the Corps de Ballet and Roberto Moranzoni will conduct for the first time with the company. The performance will include the "Valse des Cloches" ballet with Miss Gail, Mr. Bonfiglio and the entire Corps de Ballet.

"La Traviata" will be given at popular prices.

All "Lost and Found" articles advertised in this paper will be held for thirty days. The World's Office, at 4000 Broadway, New York, will be in charge of the "Lost and Found" advertisements. NAVY BENEFIT A SUCCESS.

Crowded House Applauds Thrilling Show at Hippodrome.

The success of a crowded house was won by the Naval Relief Society's benefit at the Hippodrome last night, and a performance which contained several thrilling patriotic numbers evoked applause. One of the thrills was the massed naval bands—four bands in one—which were led by Naham Franko and Sousa in different numbers. Another was exhibition drills by French, British and American sailors, and then a drill by the combined companies of Allies to the band music and singing of "Over There."

Rear Admiral Fisher, President of the Naval Relief Society, made a speech of appreciation, and Raymond Hitchcock and Leon Errol acted as masters of ceremonies. Hitchcock auctioned off for $25 a souvenir programme bearing the autographs of President Wilson and the Cabinet.

CARUSO GLAD TO SING "STAR SPANGLED BANNER"

Artistic Enough for Him, He Declares; Kisses Hand to American Soil on Return.

Happy at again setting foot on Manhattan Island, Enrico Caruso took off his hat to the biggest American flag in sight, knelt and kissed his hand to the soil. He has returned from forty grand opera appearances in Brazil. He is in good health, but says he is a bit "fatter."

"Why, I will sing 'The Star Spangled Banner'; it's good enough music for me," he said, when told of the Dr. Karl Muck incident.

"Ah, art!" he replied, when told why Dr. Muck is alleged to have refused. "It ought to be good enough for those who make a living in this country."

The situation in Italy was of great interest to Caruso. He asked for the latest news and seemed deeply grieved to hear of the continuous retreat of the armies.

"Well, if they need me, I'll go," he said, and those hearing him knew he spoke from the depth of his heart. He is forty-four years old though, and as yet men of his age have not been called to the colors.

Upon reaching New York Caruso was greeted and embraced by Gatti-Casazza, Antonio Scotti, Andreas de Segura, Salvatore Fuciti, Otto Weil and Miss Jacotelli, sister of his brother's wife.

Caruso stated to interviewers that in South America he also sang at twelve concerts, given for American, Italian, British, French and Belgian relief organizations.

"I am glad to say that more than $100,000 was realized," he said. He then added that his other fond remembrance of this tour in South America is the gold medal presented him by the American colony in Buenos Ayres.

Empty House Full House. Arthur Guy Empey, author of "Over the Top," spoke at Carnegie Hall again last night and crowded the house. Close to 3,000 persons were in the audience before 8:30 o'clock, when his lecture and demonstration of French warfare began, and within a few minutes the sale of seats was stopped.
